Welcome.

Over the last decades our speciality has witnessed an admirable effort to consolidate its scientific bases and systematic revisions have represented the “swan song” of the basis for most of our clinical protocols. Thanks to this, today’s clinical periodontology is supported by a rigorous order that is reasoned and corroborated, under what has been termed “evidence-based practice”. Protected by this premise, we will address aspects of diagnosis (supported by the focus of new technologies) and we will revise the procedures that allow us to improve the prognosis of teeth with advanced periodontal pathologies.

Furthermore, we face the challenge of starting to provide an equally structured response to clinical problems derived from situations in which we do not yet have such a corroborated scientific rigour, such as the treatment of peri-implantitis and the regeneration of vertical bone defects in the anterior sector. In addition, the evident change of the health-care model that we have seen in our profession obliges us to improve our treatment plans from multidisciplinary perspectives, which connect to the resources of orthodontics and restorative dentistry in its aesthetic dimension.

Nonetheless, we seek to outline in the congress an epilogue in terms of our most solid arguments, but with the courage of opening a prologue related to clinical issues that are becoming more important every day.

To do this, we offer the framework of a city such as Málaga: an idyllic environment in which urban changes, cultural events, and the range of artistic and gastronomic choice have succeeded in making our city one of the most attractive tourist destinations in the south of Europe. We very much wish to enjoy this meeting together.
